

TOMBSTONE MOUNTAIN

How Do You Get To Old Crow ?

From Edmonton it's 1300 miles north by the Alaska Highway to Whitehorse. Add another 330 miles of territorial roads to Dawson City. Once a month a scheduled flight takes mail and passengers, weather permitting. The air trip, especially if it happens to be a one engined plane, is downright thrilling. This is Tombstone Mountain.

WELCOMES YOU

The Anglican Church Welcomes You

Ellen Bruce on behalf of the Anglican Church welcomes you. One hundred and ninety seven of the two hundred inhabitants are Anglicans. The first thrum of the plane is heard long before it is spotted. The whole village comes running to greet you, to shake your hand. When the Bishop comes they "make service" within the hour of arrival. The church is jam packed with persons. The Exhams' home, the little log rectory can be glimpsed behind Ellen.

Beth Ann Exham helps her husband "pack" water from the river up the bank, along the path past the mountie barracks and the church to the barrel in the kitchen. Bath night must be quite a business. They live much the same as all the villagers sharing fully in work and fun and worship. Their home is always open for the children with music and games. The older folk love to "make visit". The W.A. meets there. During the Bishop and Mrs. Marsh visit in December the flow of visitors never ebbed.

Lunch Hour

Georgie Moses sees a caribou for soup for his lunch on Main Street, Old Crow. Eliza Ben Cassi is seen coming along Riverside Road from the bible study group at Sarah Abels. There are not very many young people left in Old Crow of Georgie's years. After grade eight they come to Whitehorse to school or find a life far from home. Some make the transition successfully. Others come to grief.
